91.) Passage:

The Right to Education (RTE) Act which came into effect in April 2010 mandates that the implementation of the rights enshrined in this Act be monitored by National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR) and the corresponding State Commissions for Protection of Child Rights (SCPCRs) (section 31). This is a radical new feature and set a precedent in the legislative history of India, wherein an autonomous neutral body has been charged with monitoring the implementation of a fundamental right. It presents a great opportunity to institute a system of independent monitoring that ensures that the entitlements guaranteed in the Constitution are indeed being provided to the rights holders. At the same time, it poses a huge challenge as it involves building a system that is able to receive feedback from the last child and respond to it in a manner that ensures the rights are indeed protected. It is worth pointing out here that grievance redressal and monitoring, while separate functions, are interdependent. In other words, the absence of a grievance redressal system implies that monitoring in a rights framework would necessarily entail intervention of the judiciary. A well-managed grievance redressal mechanism, on the other hand, allows for monitoring to be effective through interaction with the system rather than the judiciary. This means that for SSA to function effectively in the era of RTE, it will need to develop links with both the grievance redressal as well as monitoring structures mandated under the Act.

The focus in the functioning of National Commission for Child Rights (NCPCR) is on: (UGC NET Education June 2023)

- (A) School
- (B) Government

- (B) Are interdependent but having separate functioning
- (C) Are supervised by the University Grants Commission
- (D) Need systematic intervention through child right activists

96.) Passage:

Traditionally teachers have enjoyed a position of great respect in our country. The religious leaders and social reformers have been addressed as teachers of the people. Hundreds of thousands of teachers are still held in esteem by their pupils and the community. However, on the whole, the status of teachers has diminished during the last few decades. The reasons for this are not difficult to find: deterioration in their service conditions, the isolation in which teachers work, phenomenal expansion of the educational system, lowering of standards of teacher training, a general impression that a very large number of teachers do not perform their duty properly, changes in the value system in society, etc. The status of teachers has had a direct bearing on the quality of education, and many of its skills can be ascribed to the indifferent manner in which society has looked upon the teacher and the manner in which many teachers have performed their functions.

The teachers in India enjoyed great respect because: (UGC NET Education June 2023)

- (A) They belonged to one caste
- (B) They were literate and educated
- (C) They received high standard of training
- (D) Of their contribution in reforming the society

97.) Passage:
